What job i'm looking for? My positive points

I am looking for a solid base to start my professional career. I would love to utilize the skills I acquired in the pursuit of my academic studies. My post-graduate studies gave me specified skills that I can utilize within the workplace. I have a large array of skills that could be beneficial to any workplace. I am proficient in Microsoft office, data analysis, qualitative research, research methodology and quantitative research. I can work well under pressure which would be beneficial when working towards deadlines. My adaptability allows me to focus on the task at hand and easily adapt to new situations without a dip in quality of work. My time management allows me to fit in any assigned tasks within the given time frame without needing extensions on deadlines and thus further pushing projects beyond the deadlines. my computer literacy means I will not need any training with how to properly use work computers. I have 3 degrees, an undergraduate degree in Sociology and Psychology, a bachelor of arts honours degree in sociology and a Masters degree in Sociology. All of my academic merits have prepared me to be the best and most efficient results-driven worker I can be.

I do not have any formal work experience. But I do have 2 years of research experience from the research I conducted in order to obtain my postgraduate degrees. For both research studies, I had to conceptualize a research topic, prove its relevance to the ethical board, gather relevant data and research on the topic, come up with sampling methods to obtain the relevant data, conduct the interviews as well as analyze and interpret the results. Throughout every step of the research process, I conducted my work in accordance with the research guidelines of the institution. As well as wrote up material at every stage documenting my progress.
