Computer knowledge

I studied Computer Literacy as a module at university, gaining essential skills in Microsoft Office, internet usage, and basic programming. I am proficient in word processing, spreadsheets, and presentations. I also have a good understanding of online research, email communication, and file management. My knowledge includes basic troubleshooting and problem-solving in a digital environment. This foundation allows me to work efficiently with technology in both academic and professional settings.

Conferences, seminars

I have some knowledge of conferences and seminars, gained through my experience as the former Deputy Secretary of the TUT Student Representative Council. This role involved organising and attending meetings, taking minutes, and engaging in discussions on student affairs. My political affiliation has further exposed me to various conferences, enhancing my understanding of leadership, governance, and policy discussions. These experiences have strengthened my communication, organisational, and public speaking skills, allowing me to effectively participate in formal gatherings and decision-making processes.
